Soil profile	The terroir Schaflerberg with its mighty loess soils provides the best preconditions for a typical Weißer Burgunder of the Wagram area. The special south-eastward direction of this vineyard leads to a great temperature rise during the day, while the cool air of the nights makes for a rapid cool-down during sunset. This process benefits the development of all kinds of aromas in the grapes.
Tasting Notes	Already while looking at this glass of wine the play of colours is impressing. A deep yellow with gold tinting can be spotted. The legs, which disappear only hesitantly from the rim, presage a rich wine. As regards smell, this wine reminds one of dried meadow herbs paired with floral and multi-faceted full-ness. This wine convinces the taster with its elegant richness and its aromatic finish. Hazelnut aroma and a touch of caramel can be found. The Weißer Burgunder Reserve of the winery Waldschütz is richly complex on the palate. It does not only offer a delicate spice in taste but the finish lasts on the tongue for quite a while. A great wine with perfect storage potential!
